Construction for the Villas Is Now Underway!

Construction is now underway for the initial six villas to be built on our 25-acre property here at The Villages of Farragut. These villas are part of Phase 2, which encompasses 28 of the total 66 independent living villas, in addition to the first set of 10 garages designated for current residents.

The street names have been chosen and approved and will be announced soon. (Here's a hint -- both street names are significant to the history of Admiral David Farragut.) Detailed floor plans, exterior designs, and pricing are also forthcoming, along with a press release outlining the development.

A number of deposits for the villas have been received, and we welcome interested individuals to contact or visit the community to join the waiting list. We are thrilled to present this maintenance-free living option to our community!

John Coykendall, Master Gardener and Heirloom Seed Saver

We are honored to host a presentation by John Coykendall, master gardener, who is renowned for his knowledge and accomplishments in collecting, storing, and preserving heirloom seeds.

A Tennessee native and longtime master gardener at Blackberry Farm, Coykendall has become a celebrity in a growing movement that places a premium on farm-to-table cuisine with locally sourced, organic, and heirloom foods and flavors. His work takes him around the world searching for seeds and the cultural knowledge of how to grow them. In his book, "Preserving Our Roots: My Journey to Save Seeds and Stories," Coykendall shares a wealth of materials collected in his journals, ensuring they are passed on to future generations. Join us in the Community Room for this informative presentation on Thursday, April 18th, at 3:00 p.m.!
